CONTENTS

Preface ix
Acknowledgements xi

1 Introduction: Addressing the Sculptural Portrait 1
Newton’s Head and Garrick’s Temple 1
An Initial Encounter 6

Part I Characteristics: The Bust and the Statue as Genres 11

2 The Place of Sculptural Portraiture 13
Out of the Niche: The Emergence of the Independent Portrait Bust 13
Pretensions to Permanency: The Statue, the Bust, the Monument and the Medal 25
Painted Faces and Heads of Stone 38
The Sculptural Portrait and the Enlightenment 49
Sculpting the Self: Personal Identity, Character and the Significance of Likeness 65

3 Sculptural Conventions and Meaning 77
Dressing the Part: Conventions, Traditions and Modernity 77
Reading the Bust’s Fictions: Authority, Animation, Politeness and Play 92
‘Odzooks! A Man of Stone’: The Statue and its Conventions 105

4 Setting up the Bust and the Statue 119
Spaces, Settings and Communities of Viewing 119
Public Spaces: Encountering Sculptural Portraits in the City and the Garden 124
Images for Interiors: The Portrait Bust and its Spaces 136
Institutional Interiors and the Bust 151
Ordering the Heads: Sequences, Narratives and Patterns of Repetition 158

5 Making Images 177
Sculptors and Patrons 177
Sitting and Making 183
Model and Marble
Multiples, Replication and the Sculptural Economy
Rivalry, Collaboration and Difference

Part II  Exemplary Cases: Sitters, Patrons, Sculptors and Viewers

6  A Portrait Sculptor, his Sitters and his Viewers: Roubiliac and his Career

7  Celebrating the Illustrious
Newton and the Empiricist Bust
Handel and the Animated Statue
Pope, Literary Fame and the Authorial Presence

8  Groups, Networks and Connections
Pembroke, Folkes and Fountaine: Images of Friendship
Lady Grisell Baillie, Lady Murray and Female Virtue
Robert Smith, Trinity College and an Institutional History

9  Contemporary Heads
Lord Chesterfield and Aristocratic Politeness
Garrick and the Performative Sculpture

Appendices
A Letter from John Nevile to Cox Macro, 18 July 1755
B Charles Harris’s Catalogue

Notes
Bibliography
Illustration credits
Index